

Lorraine Stanton

Digital Artist

Lorraine has been doing art since childhood, but discovered the joy of digital art in approximately 2000. She began by first using Photoshop and similar programs for web design, then increasingly used them for artwork. Her love of the fantasy genre drew her specifically to fantasy artwork, but she also makes abstracts and nature scenes.

Fantasy Characters:

Lorraine's fantasy art often depicts fantasy women of all types - mermaids, fairies, witches, gypsies, dolls, jesters and queens. She views these women as parts of herself - at times silly, vulnerable, feisty or strong. She builds her fantasy creatures and scenes in 3-D virtual worlds, takes photos, and enhances the images in Photoshop and other programs.

Digitally Embellished Hand Drawings

Lorraine still enjoys the act of drawing. She draws by hand on conventional paper or on her iPad in any of several drawing programs, and then digitally enhances the drawing with Photoshop brushes, filters, or other methods.
